

1. Institutional Capture by Special Interests

The blogger in the science thriller “Contagion” accused the CDC of being “in bed” with Big Pharma. Is there any merit to this accusation in real life?

The CDC is a government agency that has existed since 1946, but a significant portion of its operating budget comes from donors to the “CDC Foundation,” which was founded in 1992.

Some CDC jobs are funded through the CDC Foundation.

‘(b) PURPOSE OF FOUNDATION- The purpose of the Foundation shall be to support and carry out activities for the prevention and control of diseases, disorders, injuries, and disabilities, and for promotion of public health.

‘(c) Endowment Fund-

‘(1) IN GENERAL- In carrying out subsection (b), the Foundation shall establish a fund for providing endowments for positions that are associated with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and dedicated to the purpose described in such subsection. Subject to subsection (f)(1)(B), the fund shall consist of such donations as may be provided by non-Federal entities and such non-Federal assets of the Foundation (including earnings of the Foundation and the fund) as the Foundation may elect to transfer to the fund.

‘(2) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES OF FUND- The provision of endowments under paragraph (1) shall be the exclusive function of the fund established under such paragraph. Such endowments may be expended only for the compensation of individuals holding the positions, for staff, equipment, quarters, travel, and other expenditures that are appropriate in supporting the positions, and for recruiting individuals to hold the positions endowed by the fund.

Many of the main funders of the CDC Foundation are in health, pharmaceutical, and biotechnology industries:

What about the Food and Drug Administration?

The FDA is increasingly dependent on funding from drug makers because user fees now cover nearly half of the FDA operating budget. What are the implications?

According to this FDA executive, reviewers are under pressure to expedite approval of products from the companies that provide the most funding.

Cole: The drug companies, the food companies, the vaccine companies, they pay us hundreds of millions of dollars per year to hire and keep reviewers to approve their products.

Cole: You're not going to get to certain levels of government.

It's better to stay quiet and accept it.

In 2004, FDA research epidemiologist David Graham testified before congress on how the FDA suppressed safety concerns over the anti-inflammatory Vioxx. Graham estimates that the FDA's negligence led to at least 100,000 heart attacks with as many as 40,000 deaths. Eventually, the makers of Vioxx pulled this drug from the market on their own initiative. Graham claimed this was not isolated incident, and that the FDA consistently downplayed new safety concerns on drugs that were previously FDA-approved.

Another concern is how the revolving door between these agencies & Big Pharma contributes to this ongoing conflict of interest in public health and special interests.

The Gates Foundation is the (unofficial) top funder of the WHO.

In 2019 Gates partnered with one of the main producers of mRNA vaccines, so it was in their interest to fund influential institutions of public health like the WHO and CDC.

NIH now benefits from all purchases of mRNA vaccines because Moderna and NIH “co-own” the patent for this commercial product.

This is a conflict of interest because NIH is also the primary US government agency responsible for research that determines public health.

About the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program

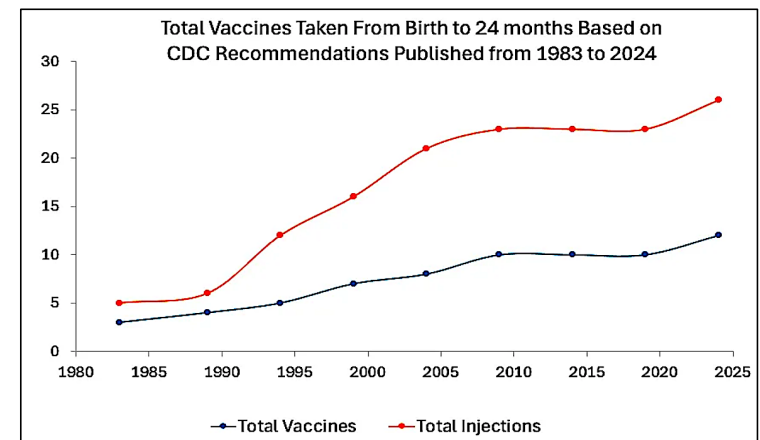

The National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986 (PDF - 312 KB), as amended, created the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program (VICP), a no-fault alternative to the traditional tort system. It provides compensation to people found to be injured by certain vaccines. Even in cases in which such a finding is not made, petitioners may receive compensation through a settlement.

The National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986 provided liability protection to manufacturers of all products listed on the childhood immunization schedule.

<https://digitalcommons.law.uw.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=3792&context=wlr>

This made childhood vaccines far more profitable because it shifted financial responsibility for vaccine injury to taxpayers by means of a “vaccine court” administered by Health and Human Services.
